Shrews Scientifically Considered. Attempts to connect physiological ap-pearances with a certain stamp of character are as old as Aristotle and Plato. Mr. Jordan, in his recently published work ("Anatomy and Physiology in Character"), seeks to establish the connection epithets of shrewish and non shrewish,' which he uses for want of better terms occupied by twelve unfortunates, the head and eyebrows and convexity of candidate the day after. That these peculiarities in connection with a shrewish character were not confined to

Mr. Jordan lays some stress on the fact that in shrewish men and women the balance the gloom that otherwise characterized the proceedings.

By rare good fortune the artist recognized a friend in a six foot student, who was watching a young man run a buzz and between the teeth of a nearly dressed and rather attractive young lady. He consented to act the part of cicerone, and under his guidance and protection the twain made the tour of the premises, beginning with the extracting room. That marriages should ever be arranged by a mutual choice of shrews with shrews appears to be very hypothetical; still, Mr. Jordan lays some stress on the fact that in shrewish men and women the skin is clear, transparent and pigment-less, often accompanying very pretty features. The nails are inclined to be thin and scanty, the eyebrows especially being poor and uneven. This is practice, with the droughts which occur two years in five, during the ripening of the fruit, the crop is practically lost where otherwise, by the retention of moisture in the soil, through a thorough system of pulverizing and cultivation, a full crop of the best fruit could have been obtained. In connection with this we observe the most important fact of all, that during the prevailing droughts the short crop causes the market to rule high, so that under this system of thorough cultivation we are doubly rewarded for the extra labor expended in the production of a full

Description of a "Greek Dinner." The latest of Washington novelties is a Greek dinner. The table, at one given there recently, was decorated with gar-lands of roses, and the center ornament was a Grecian lyre, with golden strings. The floral decorations were garlands of roses, and the walls were hung with rugs. Couches were placed at intervals throughout the room. The guests sat on great chairs, covered with rugs, and each wore a wreath of laurel, tied with purple ribbon. The menu was written in Greek (which, of course, was as plain as the roses on the table to understand), and dinner, when burning Oriental drinks were served in silver tankards -- New York Graphic.

Before I find used the second bottle the neighbors could notice that my cancer wa healtng.up. My general health had been had for two or three years. I had a hacking cough and spit blood continually. I had a seve pain in my breast. After taking six besties o S. S. S. my cough left me and I grew stoute than I had been for several years. My cance has healed over all but a little spot about in size of a balf dime, and it is rapidly disappea ing. I would advise every one with cancer to give S. S. S. a fair trial.
